

Cookie Policy

Introduction

This website uses cookies for session management to help improve the user experience for site visitors. Cookies are an industry standard way for clients browsers to store small amounts of data for websites. Websites can recall this data when you return to the website later.

You should research your browsers privacy and cookie settings and make sure you are familiar them. From there you can clear all cookies from your computer or just all the cookies from a particular website. You can also disable cookies and in some-cases enable 'in-private browsing' to protect your privacy.

The data stored in cookies can be used by some websites and advertising services to track your Internet use and serve you personalised adverts or suggestions.

Our Policy on Cookies

- This website uses some cookies for session management.
- Browsing with cookies disabled may cause some disruption to some features.
- Browsing in-private or deleting cookies between sessions will have little or no effect on sites features.
- This website does not employ any third party advertisement providers for content and does not use cookies to try and track visitors.
- The cookies used by this website are not shared with any other third party.
- Our search engine partners may insert cookies to track positive results and improve their services – in-private browsing will hinder this.